BRITNEY SPEARS

“A fuller lip is sexier, and that’s why most women get it done.”

— says Dr. Renato Calabria

Then

PRETTY PUCKER — JUNE 28, 2007
With russet lipstick slicked across her lips, Britney’s smile was perfectly sweet in Miami last summer.

Now

PUFFY POUT — OCT. 21, 2007
Brit showed off her new, pillowy, bee-stung lips as she shopped in Beverly Hills on Oct. 21.

YOU’VE got to hand it to Britney! Instead of dwelling on losing visitation privileges with her kids on Oct. 18, the pop tart ducked into the doctor’s office and got — no, not a prescription for antidepressants, but a plump new pucker! Star asked Beverly Hills plastic surgeon Renato Calabria, M.D., what Brit may have done to get her super-size kisser. “We call this lip augmentation,” says Dr. Calabria, who does not treat Britney. “There are different types of fillers [to choose from], and in some cases, surgery could be involved. But more commonly, a filler is used.” Dr. Calabria thinks Britney had about one syringe of the filler Juvéderm injected in both her upper and lower lips, with a touch more in the upper. “[Juvéderm is] the latest, most cutting-edge filler, so I think Britney Spears would go with that,” he tells Star. Results last four to five months, and the procedure takes just five minutes! Best of all, allergic reactions to Juvéderm are very rare, says Dr. Calabria. The cost? $600 to $800.
